

Manuel Antonio (One day tour)

Manuel Antonio is perhaps the most scenic of Costa Rica's National Parks. Pristine sandy beaches separate the incredibly fertile ground of the tropical rainforest from the endless expanse of the Pacific Ocean. Manuel Antonio National Park is easily accessible through its comprehensive trail system, where one can experience firsthand this virtual laboratory of diverse flora and fauna.

This experience is best enjoyed when accompanied by one of our bilingual nature interpreters (nature guides), whose intricate knowledge of the area will ensure your best chance to see the hidden treasures that abound throughout the park - from primates to termites, giant trees to fragile lichens. This tour will enable you to capture life-long memories of your visit to one of the most biologically diverse places on earth.

Description: This tour takes you on an easy walk through Manuel Antonio's National Park main trail system. On this trip it is common to find monkeys, agoutis, two-toed and three-toed sloths, white nose coatis, lizards, birds and much more. While you are observing these animals your guide will give you a detailed explanation of all the most interesting aspects of the life of all the organisms that you observe. In addition, you can learn about the history and culture of Quepos and Manuel Antonio.

Recommendations: We suggest that you bring sun block, comfortable hiking shoes, camera, and should you wish to swim in the tranquil beaches within the park, a bathing suit and towel
